TYPES OF TRIALS

Cases which come before a petit jury are divided into two general classes: Civil and Criminal.

In a civil trial, parties in dispute come to court to settle their case. The person who brings the action against another is the "plaintiff". The person against whom the action is brought is the "defendant".

In a criminal trial the people of the State of Florida, represented by The State Attorney, bring charges against the defendant. The State Attorney is commonly referred to as the "prosecutor". The "defendant" is a person or corporation accused of a violation of law.

"VOIR DIRE" OR EXAMINATION OF JURORS

Once a prospective juror has been impaneled in a case, the judge and the attorneys will ask some questions regarding his/her background. These questions are not intended to embarrass a juror in any way. The questions are to assist the attorneys in deciding which jurors to select. If the juror feels that they cannot be an impartial juror and this is not brought out by the questioning, the juror should bring this to the attention of the judge.

If a juror is excused for any reason it is in no way a reflection on the juror. When a juror is excused it means only that in this particular case it is proper and lawful to excuse him or her.

IMPORTANT THINGS TO REMEMBER DURING A TRIAL

After you are sworn as a juror in a case, there are some rules of conduct which you should observe:

- Be on time for court. The trial cannot proceed until all jurors are present.
- Sit in the same seat in the jury box. This allows the judge and attorneys to identify you more easily.
- Listen carefully. Your verdict will be based on the evidence given. It is therefore important that you hear every question asked and every answer given. If you do not understand any portion of the trial, ask the judge to have it explained.
- Do not talk about the case. You may not talk to anyone about the case. This includes the clerk, attorneys, judge, bailiff or even another juror until you have retired to the jury room for deliberations. If anyone tries to talk to you about the case or attempts to influence you as a juror, you should report it to the judge immediately.

In accordance with the American Disabilities Act, a person needing special accommodations to participate in jury service should contact the ADA coordinator at the Office of the Trial Court Administrator, phone (352) 401-6710, immediately upon receiving a summons. If you are hearing or voice impaired, call 711.
